State focuses on adolescent literacy

Panel to study needs in Idaho, recommend action plan

More than 100 teachers, administrators, policy and law-makers met in Boise May 11 for the state's first Adolescent Literacy Summit.

The Idaho Adolescent Literacy Summit was the first step in the development of a plan to address improving the literacy skills of students in grades four and higher.

Several national speakers addressed the summit including:

- * Dr. Kylene Beers, senior reading researcher and co-director of the adolescent literacy initiative in the Corner School Development Program at Yale University;

- * Angelee Eames, a national reading consultant; and

- * Dr. Katherine Mitchell, director of the Alabama Reading and Reading First Initiatives.

The intent of the summit is to develop a common understanding of the literacy needs of Idaho students and the current research on adolescent literacy. During the next few months, an Idaho Literacy Advisory Panel will begin development of a statewide K-12 literacy plan.

Idaho currently has a literacy plan for primary grades that guided the development and implementation of the Idaho Reading Initiative. The 6-year-old initiative includes twice yearly testing of all students in grades K-3, extra assistance for below-grade-level students, and training for teachers and administrators.

The day after the summit, the Idaho Literacy Advisory Panel met for the first time to begin work on a state plan.

The group discussed the research and information from the summit and talked about what other states have done with adolescent literacy.

The group will meet again in Boise on Aug. 23-24.

The summit and the literacy advisory panel's work is funded by a National Governors' Association grant and was sponsored by the Office of the Governor and the State Department of Education.

Superintendent of Public Instruction Marilyn Howard quizzed the audience at the Idaho Adolescent Literacy Summit held in May.

More than 100 educators from across Idaho met to learn about the latest research on improving adolescent literacy.

Dr. Kylene Beers, senior reading researcher and co-director of the adolescent literacy initiative in the Corner School Development Program at Yale University, was one of the speakers at the Idaho Adolescent Literacy Summit.

Spring 2006 IRI shows gains

The reading skills of Idaho's youngest students continue to improve according to results from the Idaho Reading Indicator released in June by the State Department of Education.

"We are proud of the continuous improvement we've seen during the past six years," said Dr. Marilyn Howard, Superintendent of Public Instruction. "The credit belongs to the dedicated teachers and administrators in our state's elementary schools."

The improved performance and six years of gains, however, was not enough to allow the state and all elementary schools to meet every legislatively mandated goal for student performance this year.

"While we are pleased to see many schools reach the legislature's challenging goals," Dr. Howard said. "The work of those schools missing goals should not be diminished, because we set a very high standard for grade level performance."

Dr. Howard noted that the 10-minute IRI was one indicator of the reading skills of Idaho students. Other lengthier tests, including the ISAT and the National Assessment of Educational Progress (NAEP), show higher levels of achievement by students. The 2005 Spring ISAT for third graders showed 84 percent of students were proficient and advanced. On the NAEP, Idaho was tied with Massachusetts and Texas for the strongest gains in fourth-grade reading proficiency among the states.

"These results seen together show that identifying students early and providing them extra assistance makes a difference," Dr. Howard said.

Students in kindergarten through third grade took the Spring Idaho Reading Indicator (IRI) this past April and May. The spring IRI is one of three progressively more difficult reading tests given each year to students in kindergarten, first, second, and third grades as part of a state reading initiative launched in 1999-2000 school year.

Third Grade % At Grade Level By Major Group 2001-2006

The spring 2006 results show that more students reached the highest standard - at grade level - on the IRI than the previous five years. Data show the percentage of students at grade level has increased across the four grade levels tested since 2001. Increases include 25 percent in kindergarten, 20 percent in first grade, 19 percent in second grade, and 18 percent in third grade.

In addition to continuous overall gains, Idaho has seen gains for most groups during the past six years. In some cases, the gap between groups is narrowing and in others, groups have kept pace with overall growth.

In addition to releasing spring scores, the department also published a legislatively mandated list of schools that did not meet state reading goals for kindergarten, first, second, and third grades. The list is available on department's website, www.sde.state.id.us/dept.

In 2001, the Legislature set reading targets for schools to meet starting in the spring of 2004 and ending in spring 2006.

Statewide the goals for kindergarten and first grade were met, but the goals for second and third grade were not met.

State law requires that department identify schools missing grade-level goals. Of the state's 363 schools that gave the IRI:

9 schools missed the kindergarten goal of 60% at grade level or 5% growth from fall to spring

109 schools missed the first grade goal of 70% at grade level, or 5% growth from fall to spring

83 schools missed the second grade goal of 80% at grade level or 5% growth from fall to spring

104 schools missed the third grade goal of 85% at grade level or 5% growth from fall to spring

49 of the schools that did not meet the goals cannot be publicly listed because they have less than 10 students in kindergarten, first, second or third grades. Instead, those schools will be responsible for directly notifying parents that state goals were missed.
